66 TO SOAR ALOFT ON FANCY'S WING."

From a London Paper.

TO AUGUSTA.

OH! let us seek the rural mead, Where shepherds tune their vocal reed, And every plant and every tree, Shall give its treasures, Love, to thee !

Oh ! let us fly the noisy scene, And wander o'er the spangled green; Together cull the sweets of May, All along the flowery way.

And I'll compare the vi'let's blue, That's freshen'd by the morning's dew 1. Oh! I'll compare it to the dye Which sparkles in your azure eye!

And when the blushing tender rose, Soft blooms of nature shall disclose, Oh! I'll compare it to the lip Whose juice is nectar Love, to sip!

The lily, too, whose leaf is pale, The fairest of the fragrant vale, Oh! I'll compare its native glow To thy fond bosom's brightest snow.

"TRIFLES LIGHT AS AIR."

THREE gentlemen being in a coffee-house one called for a dram, because he was hot"Bring me another," says his companion
"because I'm cold"—The third, who sat by and heard them very quietly, called out, "Here, boy, bring me a glass, because I like it."
